Reports are that Senator mc carthy died of a liver ailment. Since I haven't a union card to diagnose the nature of a disease, I won't argue. However, I submit that he died of his unmitigated gall.

mc carthy was buried on Monday of this week. But that is far from being the end of him. The fear and suspicion created by him will take its toll on generations of Americans yet unborn.

It is my opinion that, next to "Our Gem", mc carthy was the most dangerous man in this country.

Dear Sir:

It is damn stupid for me to have to write all the way from Muncie, Indiana, to an obscure little town in Mississippi to get news worth reading in these United States where "freedom of the press" is one of the things that we supposedly stand for.

As you know, many other things are dealt with in America in exactly the same way. We tell ourselvees that everything is good, and that we do not have any troubles, until far too many people believe all of these lies.

When a newspaper man revolts at printing such lies, all thinking people in the country should throw their weight against the all too strong door that he is trying to open.

Far too many people are uninformed even to basic problems in life. Far too many people are shortsighted in the segregation issue. Of course, the unthinking people in Indiana blame the southern people, but we in Indiana forget that we would also have wanted slavery if we could have only made it pay.

If I get down your way I am sure we could find a great deal to talk of. So until I have the plea-

As A Public Service We Present —

A Manual For Southerners

That which appears below is from "The Citizens' Council", official publication of the organization, dated March, 1957. We present it as a public service . . . and without comment. Indeed, we think it speaks for itself. The Editor.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Manual for grades 3 and 4 appeared last month. Copies will be sent upon request. With this issue we begin publication of "A Manual for Southerners" for grades 5 and 6. The purpose of this series is to impart to our children (and some adults too) a true understanding of their origins and the reasons for our bi-racial society.

FOR GRADES 5 AND 6

1. THE SOUTHERN STATES

The United States of America is your country, and it has forty-eight states in it. The forty-eight states are grouped into several big sections, or parts. On your map you can find the Northern states, the Eastern states, the Western states, and the Southern states. Georgia, Floriad, South and North Carolina, Virgina, Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana, and Mississippi are some of the Southern states. You will see that they are all right together when you study your map.

MANY AMERICAN LEADERS WERE SOUTHERNERS

Many of you probably think you live in South America because you say you come from the South. But Southerners, or the people from the South, are from "South United States," an not from South America at all. Some of America's greatest and most beloved leaders were Southerners, just as you are.

EARLY AMERICA WAS RULED BY ENGLAND

These Southern men had much to do with making our country free and strong. When America was a young nation, or country, it had only thirteen states. These states were between the Atlantic Ocean and the Appalachin Mountians. When you look at your map, you will see that our country today is much bigger. The thirteen young states were not free as they are today. They belonged to England, which is a country on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean. From Oklahoma comes stickers on autos which read: Built in Oklahoma by Indians. From Texas stickers read: Built in Texas By Texans. From Mississippi stickers read: Built In Mississippi By Bootleggers. But from California comes one which makes sense: Built In California By Human Beings. Of course, I think they should have been specific about the human being . . . like: WASP-Human Beings. (White, Anglo-Saxon, Protestant.)

Not an apology, but by way of explanation I'd like to clear up one thing. It seems that the idea has spread that I drink great quantities of booze. That is far from being true. I have advocated the legalization of liquor in Mississippi, but that dosen't mean I drink to any extent. (Why, the amount I drink in a year could be put into any ordinary railroad tank car.) Seriously, I vote wet but drink dry . . . and here's why: I have a stomach ulcer. I can't afford it. I don't even like the stuff.

I'm sorry to report that all the lumber offered for sale for cross making has been sold. You see, it was SOUTHERN Pine, and when the word got around it went like mad. All the kits on "How to build your own cross" went with the lumber sales. However, would you be interested in a bedsheet?

A large number of orders for the Dixiecrat Bible have come in, too. This undertaking was not a commercial one. It was the result of my desire to render some slight service to my fellow Dixiecrats. And beside, I've not finished my translation yet.

"Let's Be Human" is a column written by Harry Fleischman and appears in a hundred or so papers over the country. In his current column, Harry says:

Maybe we're wrong, but we've never yet met anybody who thought he was evil. Racketeers, greedy industrialists, Communists—all have to square their actions with their consciences. How do they justify themselves?

"Life's a racket. Everybody's out for what they can get. I'm only doing what everybody else would like to do." Or—

"Life is a dog-eat-dog struggle. You've got to do the other guy in before he can do you." Or—

"The end justifies the means. Stealing, lying, murder are all justified if your final goal is noble."

All of which reminds us of some remarkable promises made by Russia's dictator Nicolai Lenin, in the year following the Bolshevik revolution:

● The new Bolshevik regime is a revolt "against the

If I get down your way I am sure we could find a great deal to talk of. So until I have the pleasure of meeting you, keep the truth rolling, and we hope a few Americans, at least, will read.

Yours sincerely,
James O. Wheeler.

Dear Mr. East:

It is not easy to tell you how much Mrs. Vincent and I like your work. What you write prevents those who read it, whether north or south, from stumbling into emotional bypaths. You lift the subject raised by the Supreme Court's decision up to the level of intelligence and common sense and incidentally do not permit readers to put their joy and laughter into the deep freeeze for the duration. We shall all need to conserve those natural resources.

When you relate as a people, one and all, black and white, to our nation, which is not divisible, and to the world in which we must continue to live, you keep the attention of some of us who may not have the habit of thinking too much on the main issues. (Perhaps I should have said when you "orient" us—I think that is the

These Southern men had much to do with making our country free and strong. When America was a young nation, or country, it had only thirteen states. These states were between the Atlantic Ocean and the Appalachin Mountians. When you look at your map, you will see that our country today is much bigger. The thirteen young states were not free as they are today. They belonged to England, which is a country on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean. Whenever the people wanted to do something back in our early history, they had to ask the King of England first. If the King didn't want them to do something, he just said "No, you can't do it." And they had to mind him, or he would punish them.

SOUTH LED THE WAY TO FREEDOM

Now, the early Americans got tired of being told what to do by a King in a foreign country. They wanted to be free and to make their own laws. We Southerners were especially tired of the Old King of England and his laws. So when men from all thirteen states began meeting together and talking over their problems, many Southern men took the lead to win freedom for America against England.

PATRICK HENRY WAS A SOUTHERNER

Patrick Henry, A Southerner, who came from Virginia made a speech against the King of England and said to other Americans, "Give me liberty (freedom) or give me death!" Patrick Henry was a brave man to say that in those days. The old king might very well have put him in jail or had him killed. But the brave Southerner said he would rather be free than to be a slave to any King.

OUR FOREFATHERS WON OUR FREEDOM

Finally the men of our young country told King George of England that they were going to be a separate country. They told him they were going to make their own laws and run their own business. King George didn't want to lose the thirteen states. He sent his army over to America to arrest the leaders like Patrick Henry, who wanted to be free. But when his army landed on our shores, loyal Americans got their guns and met the King's soliders. Our forefathers were willing to stand up to the enemy because their freedom meant very much to them.

OUR FIRST PRESIDENT WAS A SOUTHERNER

Ameriacns won the war against King George. They were very glad to be free from him and were ready to set up their own government. Men from each state met together and agreed on some laws that all the people would like to have. Then they wanted a President for their new country. They wanted a man who was brave and whom they could trust. So they chose a Southerner who had already proved how brave and honest he was. This Southerner was George Washington. So you see a Southerner was America's first President. Because George Washington was such a good President and because he did so much for our country, he is called the "Father of Our Country."

A SOUTHERNER WROTE THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

Another great Southerner who helped build America is Thomas Jefferson. He wrote the Declaration of Independence. In this declaration Thomas Jefferson told the King of England that Americans were going to build their own country free from Kings. He told King George that one man had no right to make the laws for many men. Thomas Jefferson also helped write the ideas that we Southerners still believe in today about our government. This great Southerner helped build our American democracy.

re-establishment of the police, against an immovable and privileged bureaucracy."

- The poor peasants "should be made to see the advantage of the machine process, Socialist agriculture, by the force of example alone."
- All nationalities must be granted "full freedom of secession, the broadest local autonomy."
- High salaries should be reduced rapidly "to the standard of wages of the average worker."

Comments Theodore Draper in The Roots of American Communism, (Viking Press, New York, N. Y., $6.75):

"A system which has wiped out millions of poor peasants in forced collectivization, which has expunged whole nationalities from the map, which has terrorized its people with secret police, and which has fostered the most extreme inequality of income, started out by promising the peasantry to use no force but that of example, by unconditionally guaranteeing the rights of all nationalities, by ruling out the reestablishment of the police, and by advocating absolute social equality based on the wages of the average worker."

each other, the thirteen states of young America made a contract with each other to set up their government in Washington, D. C. If two men want to do something together, they write it down and call it a contract. Both men must do what the contract says, or the contract will not be any good. So you see, the contract protects both men. It makes them do the right thing toward each other.

OUR CONSTITUTION IS A CONTRACT

The contract the thirteen states made with each other, forming their government in Washington, D. C., is called the Constitution of the United States. All of the people of the forty-eight states of America today know that the Constitution protects their freedom. The states gave the Federal government in Washington, D. C. some powers. But they kept most of their power for themselves.

THE FATHER OF THE CONSTITUTION IS A SOUTHERNER

When Americans were writing the Constitution of the United States, they called on another Southerner, James Madison, to help them. James Madison did so much work on this contract between the states that he is called the "Father of the Constitution."

THE SOUTH IS PROUD OF ITS PART IN BUILDING AMERICA

So, you see, two Southerners helped make America's two most important documents. These men were Thomas Jefferson, who wrote the Declaration of Independence, and James Madison, who is the "Father of the Constitution." We Southerners are very proud of what our own people did for our great nation.

SEVEN OF THE FIRST TEN PRESIDENTS WERE SOUTHERNERS

These men were not the only Southerners who helped build America. There were many more. We will not name them all. Some of them helped America grow from thirteen states to forty-eight states. And some of them protected our states when they were attacked. Four of the first five Presidents of America were from the South. Seven of the first ten Presidents were Southerners. Some people call the South the backbone of America, because our people have done so much for this great country.

SOUTH STILL PROTECTS AMERICA

Southern children of today are proud of their forefathers who helped so much to make America strong and free. The white men from the South helped build our country and have always been among the first to protect it from any enemy.

THE SOUTH IS AMERICAN

Did you know your great grandfathers did so much to make a free country for you to grow up in and be happy in? No other part of the United States is more American than the South. Southerners have always protected the things that are American with all their might.

II. WHITE MEN BUILT AMERICA

We have learned that our people first came to America from England. This fact tells you that America was built by white men. England is part of Europe where the white race has always lived. When America was found by a white man, Christopher Columbus, other white men came over and made their homes here. But these settlers were ruled by England, as we have just learned.

AMERICA FORCED TO BUY SLAVES

One thing that made the Americans so mad at England was her terrible idea of slaves. English merchants wanted to make money. They bought Negro slaves from Negro masters in Africa and bought them to America to sell them. The Americans said, "We do not want black men in our country. They will not be happy among white people, and we will not be happy among them." But King George wanted his merchants to make money. So the Americans were made to buy the Negro slaves.

AMERICA NEVER LIKED SLAVERY

Americans never did like slavery, but they did not want to set black men free among them. They would like to have helped the Negro build his own country. The Negro is happy among his own race, but two races feel strange around each other. They are different from each other. God made them different, so it is natural for them to like their own people better.

The Negro slaves of America were not the first slaves in the world. Some people would like for you to think they were. But these people are not telling the truth. The Old Testament in your Bible has many stories about slavery. And these slaves in the Bible were white slaves. Do you remember that Joseph was sold as a slave to an Egyptian by his brothers? And King Solomon made slaves of some of his own people. Today, Russia has the largest slave camps the world has probably ever known. And most o fthe slaves in Russia are white people.

Dear P. D.—

Well sir, them fellers up there in the United Nations might think that they have some Earth Shaking Debates, but I'll put the one we had down heere in the Piney Woods last Sat. afternoon up agin anything they can trot out. It was a Stem Winder. Grandpa Willis and Bud Wafford pulled it off down at Lonny's Filling Station & Bar B Q place. Grandpa Willis is still mad about what happened in the Civil War. As he says, "Robert E. Lee might of give up, but I AIN'T." Bud Wafford is smart as a whip, but he ain't done so well since the WPA shut down, until they started up a WHITE CITIZENS COUNCIL out here and put him to gittin members at four bits a head. Grandpa Willis has been resentin him, on account of Grandpa collects money for the KU KLUX KLAN and claims that Bud is hornin in on his territory.

But he was rared back on a sack of cow feed and saying that every red blooded Amerikin ought to either jine the White Citizen Council, or git on a boat and go back where he come from, whether he was from somewhere else or not. Grandpa says, "That's jist tommyrot. Real honest to God pure dee Amerikins belong in the Ku Klux. White Cittysins outfit ain't what hit's cracked up to be." Bud's feeling was hurt, you could tell, and he says, "Grandpa, I'd appreciate it iffen you'd quit interferin in my business. I was here first. You kin have a go at these boys with your Kluxer talk when I git done. I don't go around runnin down your business. Fact is the KKK is alright, but hits jist too old timey for the job of Savin the South. Us White Cittyzins is up to date." Grandpa wasn't backin down though. He says, "This heere's a free county and I kin say whut I please. I say you White Council boys ain't agin enuff things." Bud says, "Thets jist a communistic propagander lie. We're agin jist as many things as the KKK." Grandpa snorted, "Why you can't trot in harness alongside us Kluxers, when it comes to real bedrock hatin. You do a fair job of hatin Jews and Catholics and Uppity Niggers, but hell, hit don't take no real hatin to hate them. I'm talkin about the Big Isshy. The ishy that's really frettin Ameriky." Bud looked surprised, "What's that ishy?" Granpa says, "Yankees. Thet's whut! You boys don't know the first thing about hatin Yankees. They've infilterated Ameriky, and I hear they've even made headway on infiltratin the White Cittyzins." Bud says, "That jist shows how much you know. We're agin Yankees. Hate em good and strong." Granpa snaps back, "Then whut you taken their money fer?" He had Bud there, but Bud was still in there fightin. "Because they air white missionary type Yankees. Big Business men. Amerikin. They don't try to jine. They jist send us donations, to help us save Ameriky and the South. Wouldn't be Christian ner good business to turn em down when they air tryin to help." Granpa grinned and looked around proud like. "See that, He admits hit. Next it will be Jews —then God knows what. Tell you right now, Bud, you White Cittysin boys keep on soshatin with subversives and next thing you know, one of them Congress Committees is going to call you in and investigate you." Bud knowed he was beat. He jist taken a chew of tobacker and left. I never butted in to the agryment. As the Bible er Shakespeare er Somebody says, "When the big fish is feedin, it's best fer the minners to stay under a rock."
